

A passion for teaching, research, and public service

UC Berkeley is internationally renowned for excellence and pioneering achievements across all disciplines. At the heart of the University's achievements are its 1,743 full-time faculty members. Dispersed among more than 130 academic departments and more than 80 interdisciplinary research units, Berkeley's professors are highly distinguished researchers and scholars — many of them are the leading experts in their fields.

Additionally, the University remains committed to hiring the very best young faculty, as reflected in the high number of Sloan Research Fellows added to the Berkeley faculty since 2000:

A public mission made possible by private support

Public-private partnerships between the University and individuals, business, and other organizations play a key role in preserving Berkeley's excellence in education, research, and public service. Support for Berkeley received a significant boost from alumni, parents, and friends who gave $409.3 million in private gifts in the 2007–08 fiscal year. This total reflects a sizable number of gifts and pledges to the University — from more than 63,000 donors.

The Campaign for Berkeley

The campus's current fundraising effort, The Campaign for Berkeley, aims to support faculty and students, learning and discovery, and service to society. The campaign seeks to raise more than $3 billion by June 30, 2013, including substantial new endowment funding to preserve Berkeley's promise for future generations.

 UC Berkeley employs about 25,700 faculty, staff, and student employees. Its spending generates nearly 13,000 jobs in the Bay Area, including more than 5,800 in Berkeley alone.

 The Berkeley Art Museum and Pacific Film Archive (BAM/PFA) is the only university museum in the U.S. to collect and show the full range of visual art, including film and video.

Berkeley's Budget

Though Berkeley is a public university, only a fraction of its annual budget comes from the State of California — and this fraction has sharply diminished in the last three decades:

A university of great distinction

The University of California was chartered 141 years ago as a public trust, setting the stage for excellence in higher education in the West. With more than 35,000 students and a distinguished faculty that has included 20 Nobel laureates over the years, Berkeley ranks as one of the world's great intellectual centers.

Teaching

The University offers more than 7,000 courses in approximately 350 degree programs; it produces more Ph.D.s annually than any other American university.

Research

In 2007–08 Berkeley received nearly $468 million in research funding, with 78 percent coming from public sources. Funding included 51 percent from the federal government; 17 percent from nonprofits; 5 percent from UC sources; and 12 percent from the private-industry sector.

Public Service

Cal has more than 4,000 student volunteers and continues to be the only school in the country to have produced more than 3,000 Peace Corps volunteers since that organization's inception in 1961.

In 2008, the Association of Research Libraries ranked the University Library as the top public research university library in North America.

The campus has more than 2,000 trees. The oldest planted trees on campus are 140-year-old redwoods near Giannini Hall.

Creating opportunity

For many students, studying at Berkeley is the opportunity of a lifetime. Berkeley serves more economically disadvantaged students than all of the Ivy League universities combined. Scholarship support from individual donors enables Cal to fulfill its public mission while providing relief for students.

- 28 percent of freshmen come from families in which neither parent has a four-year college degree
- about one-third of all undergraduates are eligible for Pell Grants, meaning their family incomes are typically less than $45,000 a year
- approximately 5,700 undergraduates received scholarships in 2007–08
- $33 million in undergraduate scholarships — many of them privately funded — provided in 2007–08

Financial Aid Challenge

Berkeley's private peer institutions are committing substantial resources to reduce and even eliminate student loan and work contributions for both low- and middle-income students. Raising private funding for undergraduate scholarships and graduate fellowships helps to reduce the financial burden placed on our students.

The Cost of Cal

The true cost for Berkeley to educate a student for one year is nearly $27,000, which accounts for instruction, academic support, student services, and financial aid. The University passes only a fraction of this cost on to students in the form of registration and fees, which this year amounted to $8,932 for undergraduates.

Undergraduate Budget 2008–09

	Campus	Off-Campus
Registration and fees	$8,932	$8,932
Housing, food, and utilities	$14,494	$9,528
Books and supplies	$1,268	$1,268
Personal expenses	$1,296	$1,430
Transportation	$596	$1,002
Total resident budget	$26,586	$22,160

Nonresident fees	$20,608	$20,608
Total nonresident budget	$47,194	$42,768

Graduate Budget 2008–09

Registration and fees	$10,214
Housing, food, and utilities	$15,370
Books and supplies	$1,040
Personal expenses	$2,338
Transportation	$2,680
Total resident budget	$31,642

Nonresident fees	$15,006
Total nonresident budget	$46,648

Approximately 175,000 people attend Cal Performances' dance, theater, and music events each year.

For extraordinary students

The University's 35,409 students, nearly one-third of whom are pursuing graduate degrees, are exceptional scholars.

On the undergraduate side, this is reflected in a 4.35 average weighted high school grade point for freshmen, 98 percent of whom graduated in the top 10 percent of their high school class.

In 2008, Berkeley graduate students received 89 National Science Foundation (NSF) fellowships, out of 913 awarded. Berkeley, MIT, and Stanford are rivals for the highest number of NSF graduate fellowships awarded in a given year.

Berkeley is also among the universities receiving the highest number of Fulbright Fellowships annually.
